

Perry, Fresh Out of College

by Jen Mabe
Apprentice Editor

Ms. Lori Perry, one of the many new teachers at NHS, is happy to be a part of the 1994 - 1995 school year. This is Perry's first year of teaching. She student taught last year at a school in Montgomery County.

Perry graduated with a bachelor's from James Madison and her Master's degree from the University of Maryland.

Perry said she likes the students, "The students are good kids. They are friendly, and they have helped me. The administration is very helpful, too".

Perry teaches three psychology classes, one sociology class, and two World History classes. After school, Perry co-sponsors the Student Government Association (SGA) with Ms. Shepherd.

She admits that she currently has no real spare time, but on the rare occasions when she does, Perry enjoys mountain camping and walking.

When asked what advice she would give to present and future students, Perry had two things to say: "The harder you work, the more it's going to pay off later. You get further if you are genuine. You will get further if you are yourself."